ITALIANS HIDE; NAVY PROVIDES OWN TARGETS

night, at that not the slightest hint of light emerged to guide Italian planes, awaiting gunners' pump-ton upon ton of shells at the canvas target, size of a destroyer. The gunners express the hope that their might find an Italian fleet.

In night practice, first the beam of a searchlight slashes into the black darkness and then star shells burst like fireworks over the target, illuminating the sea for miles. Heavy guns of the battle cruiser crash, and the entire starboard side of the ship is lit by a crimson glow. Then come billows of brown smoke and finally a mighty roar. The blasts are sufficient almost to throw anyone off balance.

But the 24 year old battle cruiser stands the brunt well, in fact, broadside a pinnace was slightly damaged by the concussion and some men were shaken down. The enemy into the washroom mess. Such a broadside had not been fired in a long time.

TURBULENCE PEACEFUL

Strangely, the most peaceful spot during the gun fire was inside one of the gun turrets. It was not even necessary to wear earplugs. The noise was so loud, it was on deck. The battle cruiser, Repulse and Prince of Wales, were in the lead, firing at a range of 12,000 yards, mounting 15 inch guns in their main batteries were both completed in 1916-24 years ago.

92nd Birthday

It's many happy returns to James H. Eadsen, 8771 76 avenue, who today celebrated his 92nd birthday. He has lived in Edmonton for 34 years and is a member of the Edmonton Alberta Pioneer and Old Timers' Association. Despite his age, he has taken an even greater interest in his community, gardening, than he has in the past. And European developments still claim his attention whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Available For War Work

Hon. Geo. Black, member for Yukon, proposed to parliament that Mennonites and Doukhobors who refuse to fight for Canada should be deported and their property expropriated. To be consistent of course all other conscientious objectors to military service should be penalized in proportion.

So far as the Mennonites are concerned, the parents of the present generation came to Canada on the understanding that they would not be required to perform military service. The older generation of Doukhobors also came under a clear understanding that their religious beliefs would not permit them to bear arms.

There is the other and very practical difficulty that the Mennonites and Doukhobors of the present generation were born in Canada. To what country could they be deported? Russia and Germany, whence their fathers and mothers came, have no responsibility for them and wouldn't accept them.

In the former war Mennonite residents of Alberta offered to serve as stretcher-bearers or in other non-combatant capacities. These and other kinds of essential services seem to be the only ways in which the Mennonites and the Doukhobors as well—can be required to help in the present war without ignoring the special conditions on which their parents came to Canada.

A "No Man's" Island

The Brazilian island of Trinidad (not the island off British Guiana from which asphalt is exported) has made the front page, as it did in the former Great War. The Alcantara is reported to have found an unnamed German raider re-fuelling there, both ships being damaged in the fight. In the former war the Carmania found a German raider, the Cap Trafalgar, re-fuelling there and sank it.

In the other war Trinidad was used as an unofficial German naval base for operations in the South Atlantic. Apparently it has been used more or less, probably more, for the same purpose during the present war. The island lies 600 miles off the coast and is uninhabited, an ideal place for fugitive commerce destroyers to meet supply ships loaded with oil from the wells which the Mexican Government confiscated with suspicious timeliness from their British and United States owners.

After the recent incident Trinidad's advantages as a re-fuelling depot for Nazi raiders are likely to be discounted by the presence of British patrol ships in the vicinity. While the island belongs to Brazil, that country does not trouble to maintain authority there, the island being too far away and of too little value to make this worth while. Brazil's neutrality is not therefore compromised by anything a belligerent power may do on the island or in its "territorial waters".

On The Industrial Front

Replying to questions, Lord Caldecote, Dominions secretary, said Britain is now making full use of Canada's capacity to produce munitions. He added "Had the United Kingdom made greater calls at an earlier date on her productive capacity, these calls would have been answered and would have inspired Canada to make still greater efforts."

This admission that the Government of Great Britain was mainly responsible for delay in getting munitions-production under way at maximum speed in Canada is no more than due. Canada took its lead in this and other matters from Britain and France, and the idea prevailed at London during the winter that British plants could turn out all the planes, tanks and other equipment the Allies would need, with supplies readily obtainable in the United States and whatever output Dominion plants would reach without forcing the pace.

Hon. C. D. Howe told parliament the other day of the progress that has been made since this comfortable delusion was dispelled. The story confirms what Lord Caldecote said about the response that would have been made had the call come sooner. From rifle-cartridges to sub-hunters and airplanes our factories have now got into their stride, and before many months tank-production in quantity also will be under way.

This is a feat in quick achievement of which Canadians in any circumstances could be proud, and which may be the deciding factor in overcoming the superiority of armament Hitler built up while the Allied statesmen were trusting to appeasement.

Strikes and lockouts have been banned in Britain and a national arbitration tribunal will settle industrial disputes during war-time. This is one type of war-time restriction which would work advantages in many ways if it were continued in peace-time, in Britain and elsewhere. Of this there is not much prospect, for in ordinary conditions people in democratic countries have not taken kindly to the idea.

For four weeks trading on the Winnipeg grain exchange did not move away from the pegged levels. Even the bulls were bearish. Such unanimity in anticipation of low prices has only one encouraging aspect. It emphasizes the complete absence of any danger of bread shortage in countries still able to carry on trade. That is something for which one-half of the world should be profoundly thankful as it ponders the present distress and prospective starvation of the other half.

Calgary boys may be provided with ranges on which to test and improve their marksmanship with .22 rifles. An immediate consideration is that boys having rifles should learn how to use them with safety to themselves and others. And no doubt in the background is the idea that should things go wrong overseas even boys in Canada may need to know how to shoot straight. The proposal is worth considering in other centres.

Washington has banned the export of aviation gasoline from the United States to countries outside this hemisphere. The fighting in Europe will not be affected, since all the belligerent countries there are drawing supplies from other sources. Japan will feel the effect, and in course of time the scarcity of fuel may offset the advantages it gained over China through the closing of the Burma road. If Japan's air fleet were grounded its hope of conquering China would be in the same position.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Today's article, more eloquent and touching than anything I could write, was left by a young RAF pilot, to be sent to his mother in the event of his death. He, alas, is numbered among those who are missing and believed to be killed in one of the bombing raids on military bases in Europe.

A TESTAMENT OF YOUTH
At the suggestion of his commander, this bereaved mother has consented to publication, in the hope that its contents may bring comfort to other sorrowing mothers. It is a fine testament of the spirit in which the young cadets of the Empire are carrying out their hazardous work in this hour of national need. It reads:

"Dearest Mother:
"Though I feel no premonition at all, events are moving rapidly and I have constructed that this letter be forwarded to you should I fail to return from one of the raids which I shall shortly be called upon to undertake. You must hope on for a month, but at the end of that time you must accept the fact that I have handed over my task to extremely capable hands—my comrades of the Royal Air Force, as so many splendid fellows have already done.

"At first it will comfort you to know that my role in this war has been of the greatest importance. Our patrols far out over the North Sea have helped to keep the trade routes clear for our convoys and supply ships, and on one occasion our information was instrumental in saving the lives of men in crippled lighthouse relief ships. Though it will be difficult for you, you will disapprove me if you do not at least try to accept the facts dispassionately. For I shall have done my duty to the utmost of my ability. No man can do more, and no one calling himself a man could do less.

"I have always admired your amazing courage in the face of continual danger, in the way you have given me as good an education and background as any one in the country and always kept up appearances without ever losing faith in the future. My death would not mean that your struggle has been in vain. Far from it. It means that your sacrifice is as great as mine. Those who serve England must expect nothing from her; we devote ourselves if we regard our country as merely a place in which to eat and sleep.

"History records with the illustrious names of those who have given all, yet their sacrifices resulted in the British Empire, where there is a measure of peace and justice and freedom for all and where a higher standard of civilization was evolved and is still evolving than anywhere else.

"But this is not only concerning our own land. Today we are faced with the greatest organized challenge to Christianity and civilization the world has ever seen, and I count myself lucky and honored to be of the right age and fully trained to throw my full weight into the scale. For this I have to thank you.

CHALLENGE TO CHRISTIANITY
For all this, you can be said to be the contrary. I still maintain that this war is a very good thing. Every individual is having a chance to give and to dare all for his principle, like the martyrs of old. However long the time may be, one thing can never be altered—I shall have lived and died an Englishman. Nothing else matters one jot, nor can anything ever change it.

"You must not grieve for me, for if you really believe in religion and all that it entails, that would be hypocrisy. I have no fear of death, only a queer caution. . . . I would have it no other way. The universe is so vast, so agonies, that of it we can only be justified by the life we lead. We are sent to this world to acquire the character and the character to take with us. Those who just eat, sleep, procreate and are no better than animals if all their lives they are at peace.

"I firmly and absolutely believe that evil things are sent into the world to try us; they are sent deliberately by our Creator to test our mettle, because He knows what is good for us.

HAS ONLY ONE REGRET
The Bible is full of cases where the way way out has been discovered by men of moral principles.

"I count myself fortunate that I have seen the whole country and know men of every calling. But with the final test of war I consider my character fully developed. Thus at my early age, with my earthly mission already fulfilled, I am prepared to die with just one regret, and one only—that I could not devote myself to making your declining years more happy by being with you, but you will live in peace and freedom and I shall have contributed to that, so here again my life will not have been in vain.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

"IT'S JUST A PHASE"
As parents grow worried and discouraged with children who manifest strange and unlovely qualities, they are tempted to turn to themselves in the pursuit of godliness. Why do we not progress faster, growing in grace?

It was the smiling remark of the wisest mother I have ever known that let me into a secret of the development of Christian life. When her boys showed a troublesome trait, she would say, "It is just a phase; they will grow out of it." And they did.

There is work for time to do in all progress and growth. Few are ever revolutionized into saintliness; we "grow in grace," and growth takes time. Heaven is not attained at a single bound. The qualities of Christ are to be learned day by day, year by year, by heart. That is why the ripest saints are usually the eldest.

We would not vex Thee, O Lord, or our own souls, with impatient haste at preferring fleshly marks perfection. Impart to us some fragment of Thine eternal patience, Amen.

Read James 1:4.

Poland

There is famine in hundreds of homes in Warsaw, and even more among the homeless. It is increasing every day. One sees hundreds of children weeping because they are hungry. Only black, heavy bread is obtainable at a comparatively low price—200 gros per day; it saves from death, but not from disease; and what about those who have not money even for that? There are thousands of such. All other articles have disappeared long ago. They are sometimes obtainable at exorbitant prices, in secret, as there is a death penalty for buying and selling at high prices. Milk, butter, eggs, meat, fruits and sugar are luxuries unknown since many months to the average population. Potatoes are obtainable in small quantities. The Germans are taking all they can. They are not hiding the fact that they would be glad to see as many Poles as possible starved. "It will give more room for us," they say. It is true that about 2,000,000 of the population have already perished under both occupations since the end of the war proper, from 35,000,000 of the total population of Poland.—The Nineteenth Century and After (London).

Pan-American Agreement

Canadians will hail with unfeigned delight the agreement ultimately reached by the Pan-American delegates at Havana, especially in view of the early reluctance of certain states to accept the eminently reasonable proposition advanced by Mr. Cordell Hull. His proposal was that the Pan-American states should establish a collective trusteeship over the American possessions of any European country which was beaten in the war. Its object was both simple and apparent. It was to make sure that the Pan-American states could pick and choose neighbors on this hemisphere. Both ideas are elementary and basic for the safety of this hemisphere from aggression, and it is most encouraging that, in spite of the early disagreement, the conference was able to make the Hull proposal the foundation of its findings.

The proposal advanced by Mr. Hull represents the germ of a regional pact for collective security. As such anyone would have thought that it would have been welcomed without demur by the relatively weak South and Central American states who have now a complete object lesson in what happens to such states as they are when faced by a powerful and non-aggresive. The history of the world since 1931, and chiefly the history of Europe since 1935, when Italy triumphantly and successfully defied the League, is known to all. The terrible consequences to small weak states have been amply demonstrated in repeated and disastrous detail since.

But Argentine and those nations that think like her have apparently not yet completely learned the lesson which has been assimilated at the point of the sword since last September by Finland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, by Holland and by Belgium. These small states, all of which reached the conclusion in 1938 and 1937 that in single-handed neutrality lay a better hope for their survival than in united, collective action, have all been conquered, subjugated or reduced to a state of helplessness by Germany and the Italian empire, and the independence and freedom there remains hardly more than a trace and that only in the case of Finland and Sweden. The rest have disappeared and whatever hopes they entertain for their future lie in the hands of the civilized world of which only Great Britain and the British Dominions are now prepared to fight.

For these reasons it came as a rude shock to Canadians to learn of the early disagreements (happily of a temporary nature) that marked the Havana proceedings, for some of the nations seemed for a moment to prefer to recall, as they stood upon the threshold of their own extreme danger, an age of great peace when a fact less and sometimes overpowering United States was apt on occasion to wave—albeit with some courtesy—the weapon named by Theodore Roosevelt as "the big stick." It would be better for today's age of fear to recall the fact that Belgium, rejecting all proposals designed to safeguard it from invasion, desperately called upon France and Britain to help her when the moment of trial supervened. It would be better for the members of the forty of Ireland's present company, wherein the Ulstermen of the north and the Republicans of the south cannot come together though the foe is at their gates, preferring rather to struggle righteously in the memory of the bitter, bloodstained controversies of their dead past—Winnipeg Free Press.

Thirty-five years ago today (August 2, 1905), the Kintessy Valley of British Columbia was the victim of a catastrophic earthquake. Someone neglected to extinguish a camp fire and walked or drove away. The ashes smoldered, then grew into flame and before the residents in the vicinity knew the forests for miles around were a sea of raging fire. The fire spread rapidly and completely wiped out; over 70 lives were lost in the district (perhaps there were more; one is never sure in the forest country how many transients or trappers or prospectors there may be); the money loss was over $1,000,000. Fifty years ago poor folk who had little left after their homes were in ashes. Quick relief was sent from Vancouver and Calgary by special trains; as usual in such cases a flood of subscription money came from all parts of the Dominion. Canadian never neglecting the occasion for practical aid in case of disaster.

One result of this calamity was the rapid extension of the province's forestry service. Nowadays there are watchers on mountain peaks with radio to send word to airplane fire fighters who are rushed to the scene. It is claimed that the 1905 disaster has never been repeated, because of these vigilant watchers by night and day. Let us hope so.

The sheer vulnerability of great cities may force us as a nation to plan more carefully for disaster.—Tracy B. Auger, TVA planning staff.

McKenney On Bridge

By WM. E. MCKENNEY America's Card Authority

At the national tournament at Albany Park N.Y., starting Monday, Aug. 5 I look for one pair to finish first or second in at least one of the major championships—Mrs. Benjamin M. O'Connor and Charles J. Solomon of Philadelphia. They have won a great many championships in the past, are fine players and have developed a fine partnership. Solomon is a life master. Mrs. O'Connor is a master. They have won many trophies in the past.

In today's hand, Mrs. O'Connor looked ahead and saw that it might be necessary to give the opponents a chance to make a mistake. She must admit that it looked as if North and South would have no difficulty in defeating four spades.

The opening lead was won by dummy with the king. Although Mrs. O'Connor wanted to discard a club from dummy on her ace of diamonds, she did not make the mistake of cashing the diamond queen immediately, but led the 10 of hearts. South won with the queen and took the trick. North's diamond led to a trump trick.

South won with the ace of spades and led the jack of hearts. North was dealer. The four trumps and had no play that would give him more than one trump trick.

"What position did you hold in your last place?" asked the merchant.

"I was a clerk," said the man.

"A clerk? What was that?"

"Well, sir, you see, when my employer wanted anything done he would tell the cashier, the cashier would tell the bookkeeper, the bookkeeper would tell the clerk and the clerk would tell me."

"And what would happen then?"

"Well, sir, if I hadn't anyone else to tell it to, I'd do it."

"Daddy," said little Tommy, "will you please give me some money?"

"What for?"

"Well, a robber might hold me up and say 'Your money or your life.' What would happen if I didn't have any?"

Blonde Cullen, the elevator boy: "Boy, sixteen-fifty, please, and I'll give you a kiss."

Elevator: "Kiss-kiss-kiss, h-h-h, how about giving up to the f-f-forty-fifth?"

Dorothy Dix Says:

The other day the newspapers contained the tragic story of a mother who committed suicide when her three sons, one 11, one 13, and one 15 years old, were arrested for breaking into homes and robbing them, rifling parked automobiles and performing numerous other acts of vandalism. The sentimentalists will cry: "Poor Mother. How terrible. She must have been driven insane by her children's conduct." And I too. Mother! How terrible! But I do not wonder that she went mad and killed herself when she saw her little boys, the wrecks of her children's lives, and knew that she is largely responsible for the disaster that have befallen them, and keep her sanity and live. For except in abnormal cases, children are what their mothers make them.

It is the custom always to pity the mother of criminals and shed tears of tears over those whose sons and daughters have bowed their heads in shame, but, in reality, we should blame the mothers who made their children what they are.

For who are the murderers except the men and women who, as children, were never taught any self-control? Who are the drunkards except those who were never made to control their appetites when they were children? Who are the thieves except the grown-up men and women who were never taught to swipe spoils off of fruit stands and take other children's toys away from them.

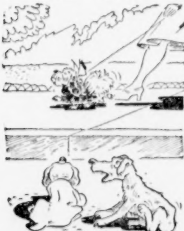

And who are the failures except the men and women whose mothers never cultivated in them any habits of industry or stick-to-it-iveness? Who are the boys who fill divorce courts except the selfish, pampered, spoiled boys and girls whose mothers have totally unfitted them for marriage by their rearing?

You know the answers to these questions. Everybody knows that no miracle ever happens that prevents the eternal law of nature "as we sow, so shall we reap" from working out its logical end.

And the pitiful thing about it all is that these women are so often good mothers, mothers who love their children but are too weak, too lazy, too fond, too busy with society or clubs to give time to the hard and strenuous job of rearing their girls and boys properly and fighting with self-willed youngsters.

Being a mother is a hard undertaking. No one will deny that. It calls for brain and brawn and backbone and everything a woman has, but if she turns out a good job she gets the highest reward on earth. DOROTHY DIX.

Your Figure, Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Here's the knee-bend, illustrated by lovely Rosemary Lane of the flickers. Later on, Rosemary will try it with the heels flat on the floor—it's even better exercise.

Every woman seems to go through a phase when she tamper with chronology. This age retrogression hit me in my late 20's and I started cutting down a year or so—hardly enough to make any difference! But my younger sister put an end to this by remarking in an amplified tone of voice, and at a large gathering, that it was "funny how our ages were getting closer together all the time!"

It seems to be an inherently feminine trait to want to turn back the calendar, and probably it's a good thing for the only way any woman can keep convincingly younger than her age—or even to hold her own—is to be radiantly well.

Our best chance of staying young is to follow a diet that is optimal in the protective elements: fruits, vegetables, milk, eggs, whole grains and butter—they are the beauty foods, for they are essential to a healthy condition of the skin, hair, eyes, teeth, and to the general well-being. As you can see, too many pastries, cocktails and heavy rich foods have no place in your scheme for youth.

Outside of a life, the only way to save your face is through relaxation—and the diligent use of cold cream. Relaxation is the latest recognized beauty aid. At the salons, they stress the value of relaxation right along with the quality of their cream. And, alas, we know all the cream in the world doesn't seem to help the woman who is harassed and rushed and tense all the time. She hasn't a chance of looking young! That inner calm is something that must be achieved for yourself in the way that works best for you.

Lean Pork Lends Itself Well To Food Budget

By MISS GAYNOR MADDOX
Lean pork is a good source of the important vitamin B1. And like other lean meats, eggs, fish and poultry, it is a good source of protein and muscle building food, and is valuable also for its iron. It's usually recognized, however, as a source of low cost with these other considerations, plus of course, its excellent flavor and your economy budget welcomes a roast of pork for Sunday dinner.

But there are other forms of pork which the housewife might find of novelty value. Take a look at these recipes. They come from Edith Barron, whose new cookbook is an excellent guide to good tasting economy cooking.

CHINESE CHOP SUEY

Serve four persons.
One pound fresh pork tenderloin (or veal cutlet or round steak), 3 tablespoons salad oil, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 medium onions, sliced, 1 cup shredded green pepper, 1 cup (1/4 pound) sliced mushrooms, 1 cup shredded celery, 1 cup shredded Chinese cabbage, 4 cups stock or 4 cups bouillon cubes dissolved in 4 cups boiling water, 1 No. 2 can bean sprouts, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, 1 tablespoon sugar.
Cut meat in 1-inch cubes. Heat oil in heavy frying pan, add salt and blend well. Add onion and meat, and saute until meat is lightly browned on all sides. Add green pepper, mushrooms, celery, Chinese cabbage and stock. Cover and simmer slowly about 45 minutes. Add drained bean sprouts. Mix cornstarch and cold water to a paste, slowly add to meat, and stir until

The third measure is just as important as the other two—the exercise and that's to keep supple. After sitting through the numerous theories of exercise to keep in condition, one well known doctor has come to the conclusion that simply putting all your joints through their full range of motion every day will keep anyone from getting stiff and creaky.

Here are some of the joint lubricators suggested:
To loosen up the knee joints, sit on the edge of a table, with the lower legs hanging free, and swing alternate legs back and forth, free and easy. Then swing legs together, and back to side. Follow this knee action with a half-knee bend, then a deep-knee bend. If your knees creak, it's a sign you need it.

To keep the hip joints supple, stand with the hand on a doorknob for support and swing the opposite leg forward and backward in a loose-jointed swing. Follow this by swinging the leg out to the side. Don't make exercise of this—it's just limbering up.

Now for the arms and shoulders. . . . Begin with the right arm. . . . Fling it up and back in a complete circle, circling several times. Circle with the other arm. Then fling the arm out to the side and up. Repeat with the other arm.

Wind up by sitting on a chair and holding the head loosely from one side to the other. Then cross the legs and circle each foot at the ankle.

All of this helps you to feel young.

STUFFED FRESH SPARERIBS

Four pounds fresh spareribs, salt, pepper, 1 quart sauerkraut, 2 teaspoons caraway seeds, 4 grated raw potatoes.
Select 2 sections of spareribs to match. Wipe meat with cloth and rub with oil. Take one can of sauerkraut 5 minutes. Soak sauerkraut in cold water and drain. Combine sauerkraut with caraway seeds and raw potato. Place one section of spareribs in large baking pan. Pile on the sauerkraut, mix and place other section of spareribs on top. Cover and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 15 minutes of baking in brown.

MANY PARISIAN DRESS DESIGNERS ARE IN PARIS

Paris fashion designers may be anything else but Parisian, says Janet Flanner in her book "American in Paris." Among the famous dressmakers who turn out Parisian models, but are not Parisians, are Mainbocher, who is a native of Chicago; Aline Schiaparelli, from a famous Italian family; and Gabrielle Chanel, native of Auvergne, whose place is to a Parisian what a Scotchman is to a Londoner.

Of all the famous couturiers discussed by Miss Flanner in her book only Paul Poiret is a true Parisian.

Eighty eggs are required in spelt cake. Spelt cake, in which potato flour and sugar are the only other ingredients.

Your Baby And Mine

Starchy foods make up such a large part of the diet of every baby that it is unnecessary to argue their use. But, when the baby shows some taste for the familiar starches, the parent provides in the menu, the mother is concerned for fear without them the diet may be one-sided.

It is not at all unusual for a child to show some aversion for some particular food which is necessary to his development. For instance, a child who develops a stubborn constipation after partaking of it, some distaste may be merely temporary and should go unnoticed, but if it is a chronic distaste or the reaction is constant, it may be considered to be allergic in character and the child better off without that particular kind of breakfast food.

But there are all kinds of starch foods which may take its place. There are cereals made of other grains, brown rice (brown speck), it contains the outer coat which is rich in minerals and vitamins, rye, whole barley, oats, and cornmeal. They are all usable either in gruels or in the form of breads for baby to enjoy if he can't eat cereal.

Potatoes and bananas are highly starchy foods which contribute both heat and energy to the baby's diet. Potatoes are best when boiled or baked in their skins for next to the skin is valuable minerals which are lost in the peeling or cooking after peeling. Bananas can be served raw (when yellow and brown speckled) or they may be baked in the skins and served instead of potato at any meal.

Cooking the cereal is an important factor in its digestion. Partially cooked, like the other raw starches, puts a burden on baby's digestion for starches should be partially digested by chewing reflex with the saliva. Babies chew their foods inadequately so we should allow for that and give them well-cooked starch. Coarse cereals take an hour in the double-boiler after partial cooking in hot boiling water on top of the stove and finer cereals require a half-hour of this same top cooking.

Then these must be served immediately as allowing them to stand renders them tough and adds to which form they are anything but appetizing to the small child.

Our leaflet on "Foods for Young Children" contains recipes for cooking other foods. Any reader interested in this subject may obtain it by sending in your request with a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Mrs. Edred of the Baby and Mine department in care of this newspaper.

Myrtle Meyer Edred will answer your questions about diet, general care and management of children if you will send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your letter to Mrs. Edred of the Baby and Mine department in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

Minute Make-Ups

If your skin has become dry and rough, finish your next bath with a salt rub. Take one cup of common table salt and one cup of epsom salts and mix them together. Spread the mixture on a flat brush and rub over your body till you feel the invigorating tingle. Rinse the salt off of course.

Points For Parents

By EDITH THOMAS WALLACE

This illustration shows a mother and child playing with blocks. The mother is sitting on the floor, and the child is standing next to her, playing with blocks.

Entering into a child's play may change what seems to him an interruption into an accepted part of his program.
